During the meeting, the Speaker welcomed the former Members and expressed his appreciation for their years of service to Parliament and to the country. He observed that their collective parliamentary experience forms an important part of Malta's institutional memory and continues to offer valuable insight into the development of the country's democratic and parliamentary institutions.

The discussion focused on the importance of maintaining a strong connection between Parliament and its former Members, as well as on the contribution that former parliamentarians may continue to make by sharing their experience, encouraging civic participation and promoting a greater understanding of parliamentary democracy.
